Program guide ad overseer Phil Bannon would be quick to point out, were he standing in front of you pitching for ads, that a message in the KRAB program guide can serve many useful purposes. Suppose you don’t have a product or service to offer to the gentry. Maybe there’s just one person you wish to contact in a unique and interesting way. If he or she doesn’t receive the program guide, for no charge other than that of the ad, Sila File will send ten (10) copies of the guide containing your ad to whomsoever you wish, be it the President (R.M. Nixon does not, at the present time, receive a program guide), Sammy Wynette, or even Buffalo Bob. For a mere five dollars you can go on record with your message. Or, you can go in with some friends and purchase a larger space. Don’t delay, call the station any weekday (LA 2-511) and ask for Phil Bannon, or if he’s not there, Sila File. (Deadline for the September guide is August 15.)

For a long time now I've been watching television, and for almost as long I've been wondering why: why I watch it, why it's so terrible, why I waste time asking why. My first memories are not of games in the front yard or toys at Christmas or fishing trips. I distinctly recall, almost from birth, Crusader Rabbit, with the little cross on his chest. I saw Uncle Miltie, when he was Uncle Miltie, and even now I feel a sense of pride that as a five year old I thought he was a jerk. Five years old. When I was five I proclaimed to my friends that KING T.V. had been numbered for me, (thank you, Bullitt family.) I saw Annie Oakley, and thus women's liberation seems like old stuff. (Remember how Lofty Craig, Annie's father's deputy, was always getting in trouble and how Annie always had to save him, usually by shooting the belt off the villain's pants?) I remember the fat kid Rin Tin Tin was always saving (a Dog's Liberation show) and Elfreda Von Nardoff crying through the bogey questions on Twenty One. I remember being bored to death by some guy who wasn't supposed to be on but was and was then cancelled for good by a crafty old lawyer named Welch. I remember I Remember Mama and watching my brother drive a boat on the third episode of the Mickey Mouse Club. (It was the first "Anything Can Happen Day," and, setting the trend, nothing happened). While other kids in the neighborhood were swimming or fighting or selling lemonade, I was doing Broderick Crawford impressions. I can't watch channel eleven much anymore because it's like seeing my whole childhood pass before my eyes, 30 minutes at a time, like falling off a floating bridge. What I'm trying to say is that somehow, stored in my mind, is a whole 21 inch mediocre history of America. When Dorothy Gale falls asleep, she sees Oz. I see Leave It to Beaver.

We devout television watchers have learned to keep quiet, though. When everybody from F.C.C. Commissioners to the Hare Krishna folk say television is noisy, admitting you watch it is like admitting you suck your thumb. In some cities where they have decent educational television, like San Francisco, or Boston, television watching is sometimes permissible, but you'd better be the who is caught watching Ironside when he should be watching the Life and Legacy of the Fruit Fly.

Somebody, Buckminster Fuller maybe, predicted that in a few years 40% of the American work force will be involved in some phase of entertainment. Because of automation and shorter work hours, Americans will crave entertainment as never before. Does it then not seem logical that the television network executives would try to improve their product to make sure all that entertainment money doesn't go to movies, or recordings, or (God forbid!) back into radio? But it is obvious to almost everyone that television is moronic, cliche-ridden, terrible. And it's getting worse! Why?

Aha! the devout T.V. people say. You've made one error. Television is not getting worse. It's not getting better, either. Television is not changing at all. I defy anyone to find a worse adventure show than Sea Hunt, which ran for 5 years back in the great old days of television. Same rotten plot, same week, terrible dialog, insult performances. Sea Hunt had everything. If it comes out this fall as a new series, all they'd have to do is pollute the water a little bit and it'd run for another five years. With all of America changing, television has stayed the same. A bad trackside interview, in color, via satellite, is still a bad trackside interview. Even though you can sit in your easy chair and turn the set on by remote control, the same junk still shows up.

My solution to making television watching enjoyable is to watch only those things I enjoy. That of course, is not as simple as it sounds. Very often a portion of a program is good, and the rest Sea Hunty. For example, the opening of Men From Shiloh is a fine example of creating the true feeling of the old west. It's only about 30 seconds long, and ends abruptly with a close-up of Stewart Granger, looking as old west as a phone book. Other fine opening credit work is being done by Reza Badiyi (Hawaii Five-O, Mannix, Dan August) and the Mary Tyler Moore show has nice opening and closing credits (in fact, the whole show is excellent, specifically Edward Asner and Ted Knight.) But I vowed I wouldn't recommend whole programs. That's for each individual to decide.) Practically every Morning J.P. Patches shows an old Warner Brothers '40's cartoon, including some propaganda pieces that should have been burned when Sony went up on the big board. Pet lovers will go for the new breed of cut food commercials. Marie Wilson's New Dimensions ad is the tragic performance of the decade. A cousin of mine watches Lawrence Welk every week, hoping to see him trip over a mike cable. (Once you see it, you have to see it again, he says.) Local television is a treasure chest of interesting moments: Ray Ramsay's weather forecasts, John Raye's news, Bob Cram trying to read the little writing on his drawing board, Sandy Hill botching three out of four phone calls on the Big Money Movie, or Bob Corecoran's new appearance since he sold some time to a hairpiece store.

These are only suggestions. If you have some time, and a strong stomach, you should be able to find 5 good, entertaining minutes of television a day. If you can't, there's always Sea Hunt reruns on Channel Eleven. Ten-Four.
